

DO THEY COME IN GROWN-UP SIZES?

DOING IT FOR THE KIDS

GRAZIA
EXCLUSIVE

8 AUSTRALIA'S FASHION INDUSTRY HAS CREATED UNIQUE AND AMAZING CHILDRENSWEAR IN SUPPORT OF UNICEF

PHOTOGRAPHY HAROLD DAVID

FROM the diamante-encrusted slippers to the tutu fit for a little princess, this is the collection that will send toddlers into a fashion frenzy. Inspired by the innocence of youth, these one-off garments and accessories have been created by 11 of our leading fashion labels in support of UNICEF's Designers United campaign. Launched May 11 and supported by Grazia, each item sold will raise funds for UNICEF Australia's Maternal Health Appeal. "There is nothing more important than maternal health," says shoe queen

Terry Biviano at our exclusive shoot – who designed pretty slippers inspired by her young niece. "Siena is happy, healthy and carefree, with boundless opportunities and dreams. Sadly, not every child is as fortunate, and that reminds me how important it is to support UNICEF." Biviano's slippers were donated to UNICEF along with pieces from sass & bide, Willow, Leona Edmiston, Jayson Brunson, Nicola Finetti, Ruby Smallbone, Therese Rawsthorne, Alice McCall, Lover and Little Joe.

Every day, 1500 women die during pregnancy and childbirth, with more than one million newborns unable to survive their first 24 hours of life. Up to 80 per cent of these deaths are preventable, and the money raised will help UNICEF train midwives, provide basic obstetric equipment and educate young women across the world about maternal health risk signs. Each one-off piece will be on sale at www.unicef.org.au from May 11. Donations to UNICEF's Maternal Health Appeal can also be made online

From left: Lover's Susien Chong and Nic Briand, sass & bide's Sarah-Jane Clarke, Gail Elliott, Leona Edmiston, Terry Biviano, Nicola Finetti, Ruby Smallbone and Therese Rawsthorne

WORDS: SARAH REED. SITTINGS: EDITOR PETER SIMON PHILLIPS. STYLING: FRANCESCA BELLI. PHOTOS: [unreadable]